Protocol: keeping a straight path?

This document provides some guidelines, in the shape of a word cloud, to support the GM in leading the interview. It couldn't be a flowchart, as the various topics interconnect, and is neither definitive nor exhaustive. It is meant to evolve with each session recorded and shared on the Mosaic. Although it is best not to take too many notes, as an android would have a more efficient hard drive than our brain, the GM can use this document to discreetly mark the topics that have been brought up by the player: indeed, it is preferable to base the android's questioning solely on the player-as-volunteer's words. To that end, it can be useful to frequently rephrase the player-as-volunteer's statements, or try to make out a new definition based on these, in order to create opportunities for the player to correct themself. However, if the conversation seems to reach a momentary dead-end while some topics remain unexplored, the GM-as-android may use sentences such as "I recall that…", "I have been taught that…": "It was brought to me that there exists disparities in the way individuals of different sexes experience pleasure. Can you tell me more about that hypothesis?"

Do not hesitate to encourage the player-as-volunteer to be specific and to share personal experiences. The goal of the GM-as-android is to explore the most of these themes by building closely on what the player has to say.
